

As Ordered by the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas, August 6, 1996

In August 1996, the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas, Vera v. Bush, redrew 13 districts (3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 18, 22, 24, 25, 26, 29, and 30).

Special elections for the redrawn districts were held concurrent with the general election on November 5, 1996.

The district court ordered the plan (PLANC746) to remain in place indefinitely.

As Ordered by the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Texas, November 14, 2001

Doug-

Thanks for those nice comments which I can easily return. Was really impressed w your knowledge, judgment, and demeanor during high stress times. You helped keep the ship afloat and on an even keel. Kel too! It was a pleasure getting to know you both and I trust our friendship will be evident for many years to come. Look forward to staying in touch.

Congressman Smith:

Doug Davis in Austin, Texas, here. Thank you for your indulgent, and never-ending patience in dealing with Congressional redistricting. Your counsel and friendship was most helpful to Senator Seliger and the rest of the Senate. I know how much he enjoyed working with you. In what I'm sure sometimes felt like a thankless job; you always kept your bearings, faithful to your colleagues, and respectful of the legislature's prerogatives. I am glad things came together, and I hope that the delegation is pleased with the product.

Please call anytime if I can assist you with anything. Most of all, good luck up there with all that you have on your plate. As a busy Chairman I often wondered how you had enough bandwidth to keep everything straight. Congratulations, and thanks again for everything. Doug Davis.

Subject: HEARING ON PROPOSED CONGRESSIONAL REDISTRICTING MAP FRIDAY 9AM AT THE TEXAS CAPITOL

Dear members of the Texas Latino Redistricting Task Force:

Below you will find an article from the Rio Grande Guardian with some of the reaction to the congressional redistricting map released yesterday by redistricting chairmen Solomons and Seliger. Please note that a hearing has been set for Friday morning at 9am at the Capitol to take testimony on the proposed map. We plan to testify and we need your help organizing additional testimony. As always, MALDEF will provide background materials and talking points to anyone willing to testify.

It is critical that Latino residents from around Texas testify at the hearing and highlight the problems with the proposed map. For example, residents of the Rio Grande Valley and the DFW Metroplex can discuss population growth in their areas and the fact that the proposed map does not create additional Latino opportunity districts in these regions. Residents of current District 20 (San Antonio) can testify that it was not necessary to reduce the Latino population and reduce Latino ability to elect the preferred candidate in that district. Residents of Houston can discuss the fact the map does not create our proposed coalition district and does not fairly reflect Latino population in Harris County. EVERYONE can testify that the map does not create enough Latino-majority districts in Texas.

Bottom line – it's crunch time. We need to mobilize ourselves and our partners to testify in opposition to this map. The testimony is vital to creating a legislative record for DOJ and future litigation. Thanks,

PL 311

For Attorney Eyes Only

Congress004

McALLEN, June 1 - U.S. Rep. Rubén Hinojosa has slammed a new congressional redistricting map drawn by Republican leaders in Austin for failing to include an additional seat for the fast-growing Rio Grande Valley.

"What has been proposed... is completely unacceptable when it comes to fairness to deep South Texas. We deserve, and I mean really deserve, a fourth congressional district anchored in the Rio Grande Valley," said Hinojosa, D-Mercedes.

"How can they deny the residents of the Rio Grande Valley what they've long deserved? In the past two decades our population has increased in each of those decades by 45 percent. This map blatantly closes the door on full representation of our citizens."

Hinojosa told the Guardian he was particularly disappointed because the GOP's point man on congressional redistricting, U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, had told congressional Democrats a couple of months back that of the four additional congressional seats awarded to Texas, two would be drawn to favor Republicans and two drawn to favor Democrats. If this had happened there would have been a very good chance of the South Texas border region getting an additional fourth congressional seat.

State Sen. Kel Seliger, who drew the map with state Rep. Burt Solomons, defended his work.

"I believe this map is fair and legal, and will serve the people of Texas well for the next ten years," he said.

Seliger, R-Amarillo, is chair of the Senate Committee on Redistricting. He unveiled the map Tuesday with state Rep. Burt Solomons, R-Carrollton, chair of the House Committee on Redistricting. Their map is known as Plan C 125. It can be viewed here.

Late Tuesday, Gov. Rick Perry added congressional redistricting to the call for the special session now underway at the state Capitol. Seliger immediately called a public hearing on congressional redistricting. It will be held on Friday in Room E1.016 at the state Capitol.

Every ten years states have to redraw their congressional district lines to take into account population shifts. After the 2010 Census population numbers were issued Texas was awarded four additional congressional seats, to take into account the state's population growth over the past decade. At the next election, 36 congressional seats will be up for grabs in Texas, four more than at the last election.

State Rep. Aaron Peña, a member of the House Committee on Redistricting, sent out a tweet on Tuesday saying the Seliger-Solomons map was in all probability the map the legislature would adopt. Peña told the Guardian as long ago as last summer that the new congressional lines would likely include a district anchored in Corpus Christi and the Seliger-Solomons map confirms this.

The map is expected to come in for fierce criticism from Latino civil rights groups such as the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund and the League of United Latin American Citizens. These groups had hoped that at least two of the four new congressional districts in Texas would be drawn Latino majority. After all, according to the Census, 65 percent of the growth in Texas over the past decade is attributable to Latinos.

The Seliger-Solomons map does not increase the number of Latino majority districts. One new Latino seat, District 35, is created. It runs from Bexar County to Travis County. However, District 20, currently held by U.S. Rep. Charles Gonzalez, D-San Antonio, sees its Spanish Surname Voter Registration percentage drop to 49.5 percent, which means it may no longer perform as a Latino majority district. "I cannot imagine anything other than a Hispanic candidate winning," Seliger told the Guardian, in reference to District 20.

Latinos in Dallas-Fort Worth will also likely be bitterly disappointed that no Latino-majority district is drawn for the metroplex. There are more Latinos in Dallas-Fort Worth than the Rio Grande Valley. However, none of the congressional seats in the region are Latino majority.

In South Texas, the Seliger-Solomons map makes a number of significant changes. For one, the map splits Corpus Christi from Brownsville. This helps freshman U.S. Blake Farenthold, R-Corpus Christi by removing the more Democratic southern part of his district. Under the Seliger-Solomons plan, Cameron, Willacy, Kenedy and Kleberg counties are removed from District 27. Instead, the district runs north around the Coastal Bend to Matagorda County. It thus becomes less Hispanic and more Republican. The Guardian sought comment from Farenthold about the new redistricting plan but his office did not return calls at press time.

Removed from District 27, Cameron, Willacy, Kenedy, and Kleberg counties are placed in the new District 34 seat, which extends all the way north to Lavaca County. It includes Jim Wells, Bee, Goliad, and Dewitt counties, and the southern half of Lavaca County. District 27 also takes in a portion of Hidalgo County south of Expressway 83 west to U.S. 281. The seat will likely be anchored in Brownsville. Cameron County District Attorney Armando Villalobos has expressed interest in running for this seat, if it is adopted.

District 15, currently represented by Hinojosa, extends all the way north to Guadalupe County under the Seliger-Solomons plan. It includes the central part of Hidalgo County, including McAllen, Edinburg, and most of Pharr, along with the counties of Brooks, Duval, Live Oak, Karnes, as well as parts of Gonzales and Guadalupe counties.

District 28, currently represented by U.S. Rep. Henry Cuellar, D-Laredo, is also reconfigured. The district has less of Hidalgo County than before but picks up Maverick County. The cities of Mission, La Joya, Peñitas and Sullivan City stay in District 28. It includes the counties of Maverick, Zavala, Dimmit, Webb, Zapata, Starr, Jim Hogg, McMullen, Atascosa, and Wilson counties, plus the eastern part of Bexar County.

Cuellar said he would have liked to retain more of Hidalgo County but overall was happy with how the map looks, as it relates to his district. "Personally, I am glad I am still part of Hidalgo County. I've always said I want to be part of Hidalgo County, Starr County, the Jim Hogg area; those areas. I'm still part of that area," Cuellar told the Guardian.

However, Cuellar was less happy with the rest of the Seliger-Solomons map. "Overall, I'd sort of want to see a map that is more of a picture of Hispanic growth. If the state of Texas has grown so much it's because of the Hispanic districts. I wish we would have seen one of those in the Dallas/Fort Worth area because we have over a million Hispanics and if they don't introduce a Hispanic district up there I think that could create tension with the Voting Rights Act," Cuellar told the Guardian. Cuellar pointed out that the unveiling of the map is only the "first step." He said there still had to be public input, adoption by the legislature and then, mostly likely, court action.

In his interview with the Guardian, Seliger said the map was developed with input from many members of Congress, particularly Congressman Smith.

"Members of Congress have been in and out of Austin in very large numbers. Early on last year sometime the Republican delegation or most of them selected Lamar Smith as their point person. He has done that in a very dedicated fashion and a protective fashion and so I am in touch with him all the time," Seliger said.

Seliger's counterpart in the Texas House, Rep. Solomons, issued this statement about the map:

"There has already been a lot of discussion about these districts, and other groups and legislators have already released their maps. This map represents the discussions Senator Seliger and I have had throughout the session with members of the public, interested stakeholder groups, and elected officials. I appreciate all the hard work the members of our committee and the members of the Legislature put into redistricting during the regular session and I am looking forward to completing our work."

Dear members of the Texas Latino Redistricting Task Force:

Below you will find an article from the Rio Grande Guardian with some of the reaction to the congressional redistricting map released yesterday by redistricting chairmen Solomons and Seliger. Please note that a hearing has been set for Friday morning at 9am at the Capitol to take testimony on the proposed map. We plan to testify and we need your help organizing additional testimony. As always, MALDEF will provide background materials and talking points to anyone willing to testify.

It is critical that Latino residents from around Texas testify at the hearing and highlight the problems with the proposed map. For example, residents of the Rio Grande Valley and the DFW Metroplex can discuss population growth in their areas and the fact that the proposed map does not create additional Latino opportunity districts in these regions. Residents of current District 20 (San Antonio) can testify that it was not necessary to reduce the Latino population and reduce Latino ability to elect the preferred candidate in that district. Residents of Houston can discuss the fact the map does not create our proposed coalition district and does not fairly reflect Latino population in Harris County. EVERYONE can testify that the map does not create enough Latino-majority districts in Texas.

Bottom line – it's crunch time. We need to mobilize ourselves and our partners to testify in opposition to this map. The testimony is vital to creating a legislative record for DOJ and future litigation. Thanks,

1 June 2011

Steve Taylor and Maggie Morato

McALLEN, June 1 - U.S. Rep. Rubén Hinojosa has slammed a new congressional redistricting map drawn by Republican leaders in Austin for failing to include an additional seat for the fast-growing Rio Grande Valley.

"What has been proposed... is completely unacceptable when it comes to fairness to deep South Texas. We deserve, and I mean really deserve, a fourth congressional district anchored in the Rio Grande Valley," said Hinojosa, D-Mercedes.

"How can they deny the residents of the Rio Grande Valley what they've long deserved? In the past two decades our population has increased in each of those decades by 45 percent. This map blatantly closes the door on full representation of our citizens."

Hinojosa told the Guardian he was particularly disappointed because the GOP's point man on congressional redistricting, U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, had told congressional Democrats a couple of months back that of the four additional congressional seats awarded to Texas, two would be drawn to favor Republicans and two drawn to favor Democrats. If this had happened there would have been a very good chance of the South Texas border region getting an additional fourth congressional seat.

State Sen. Kel Seliger, who drew the map with state Rep. Burt Solomons, defended his work.

"I believe this map is fair and legal, and will serve the people of Texas well for the next ten years," he said.

Seliger, R-Amarillo, is chair of the Senate Committee on Redistricting. He unveiled the map Tuesday with state Rep. Burt Solomons, R-Carrollton, chair of the House Committee on Redistricting. Their map is known as Plan C 125. It can be viewed here.

Late Tuesday, Gov. Rick Perry added congressional redistricting to the call for the special session now underway at the state Capitol. Seliger immediately called a public hearing on congressional redistricting. It will be held on Friday in Room E1.016 at the state Capitol.

Every ten years states have to redraw their congressional district lines to take into account population shifts. After the 2010 Census population numbers were issued Texas was awarded four additional congressional seats, to take into account the state's population growth over the past decade. At the next election, 36 congressional seats will be up for grabs in Texas, four more than at the last election.

State Rep. Aaron Peña, a member of the House Committee on Redistricting, sent out a tweet on Tuesday saying the Seliger-Solomons map was in all probability the map the legislature would adopt.
